RARE BOOKS WILL BE SOLD THIS WEEK

Duplicates From the Collection of Huntington, Bixby and Church.

SIDELIGHTS ON AUTHORS

A book sale of unusual interest and importance will begin next Wednesday in the Anderson Galleries. It consists of duplicates and selections from the libraries of three famous collectors, Henry E. Huntington, William K. Bixby and E. Dwight Church.

Mr. Huntington has been an indefatigable collector for many years and has purchased en bloc four magnificent collections, those of the Duke of Devonshire, E. Dwight Church, Beverly Chow and Frederick W. Halsey. It followed naturally that he acquired many dupli-cate volumes, even of those that are the rarest. Only a few of the duplicates are included in the present auction, but ome additional sales are to be arranged later.

The consignment from Mr. Hunting-Humourist," a complete set of "Comic, Almanacs" and possibly the only copy in existence of "London Characters" in its original boards.

Bixby's Reasons for Selling.

Mr. Blxby has written a letter, printed in the catalogue, explaining that lack of space has compelled him to thin out his overcrowded library. He adds: he 'Cloister and the Hearth.'

Cockeroft and Mrs. T. Gaillard Thomas. Senhor de Mendoca was a former Minister from Brazil to Washington and was well known as a collector. He had a wide and catholic taste and keen instinct for style in art. Most of the old masters in the sale belonged to him.

Prominent in the Mendoca collection

The consignment from Mr. Huntington consists mainly of English colored plate books of the nineteenth century. Among them are the rare "First Edition of Ideas," by Alken; "Accidental and Incidental to Hunting," the "Memoirs of Mytton," Nimrod's "Life of a Sportsman." Apperley's "The Chase and His Hunting Experiences" and fourteen volumes of the "Annals of Sporting."

Among the Cruikshank items are the first issue of the first edition of "The Huntourist," a complete set of "Comic" water and the perpendicular lines of the balconied houses in shadow are emphasized by the tall palms and continued even in the slender figure of a woman who approaches the pool with a water jar.

An "Interior" is equally typical of Descamps and shows the shadowy recesses of a cafe that is lighted by the reflections from a narrow sunlit street. In the different alcoves are seen serious chess players, idle gossips and soldiers, and the canvas presents a significant and picturesque slice of the panorama that enacts itself each lazy afternoon in the Orient.

Charles Reade manuscripts: I send you the 'Cloister and the Hearth.' I have many manuscripts of Henry D. Thoreau: I send some to you. So with regard to many other authors. In making selections I have included many imporant items, as I wish to have the sale an interesting one."

Mr. Bixby has certainly succeeded in having his wish. His section of the sale is especially piquant, and includes not only quantities of important original manuscripts, but many privately printed volumes giving novel glimpses of celebrated personages. The Americana that is included is particularly interesting.

The Hawthorne set contains mementoes, manuscripts and intimate details of the family life of the novelist, emphasizing, as does each new fact in regard to the novelist that comes to light, his simplicity and charm of character. Some, of the items are mere ideas for plots or characters, jotted down upon stray bits of paper, and similar to those to liberally included in "The American Note Book." There is a short note written by Huwthorne to his little daughtet that you have grown a good girl. Give my love to mamma, and teil Julian that I will spank him by and by, Your affectionate faffier." There is the original manuscript of "Dr. Grimshaw's Secter!" with comments by Julian Hawthorne, now himself a writer; there is also a volume of the privately printed "Love Letters" of Nathaniel Hawthorne.
